

WTF 5k – 7-14-13 – Results

As promised, the trail was tough and twisty and slippery and beautiful. And thanks to Kirk running a pre-loop, it was mostly spider web free.... Race morning was very humid so most runners finished so soaked with sweat it looked like they may have taken a dip in the Little Gunpowder River (well, actually, some did!).

Edgar Narcisco was the first male and overall winner in a very fast time of 29:48, and Moira McGill was the first female in a very respectable 37:02. Behind each of them were a lot of good personal performances on a very tough trail. Congratulations to all of you!

Post run refreshment included fresh watermelon provided by Phil, and you never tasted anything so good. Cold, juicy, fresh watermelon after a steamy run. Mmmmmm.... I think maybe the WTF should now officially stand for the Watermelon Trail Five.... Thank you Phil!!

And thanks to Mary Hogan who once again provided excellent assistance at the finish line.
